

My story is about a cub who is sitting around mind his own business until a cylinder sneaks up behind him and startles him. This makes the cube angry, and he starts trying to catch the cylinder as he chases it around the area. Eventually the cube exhausts itself and stops chasing the cylinder. The animation is supposed to show anticipation and stretch. This is supposed to show the momentum of the movement and the emotions of the shapes.